New England Law | Boston is currently accepting applications for the position of Visiting Professor of Practice for the 2023-2024 academic year.

Visiting Professors of Practice will be expected to teach four courses in the academic year, at least one of which will be a core course; and to participate in all aspects of the New England Law community, in particular programs aimed at students’ experiential and professional development. Visiting Professors of Practice are expected to be in full-time residence at New England Law.

The law school is seeking applicants with significant post-graduate legal or closely related experience at a high level and strong potential for teaching. This year, the law school is particularly interested in applications from candidates with experience and interest in teaching in the areas of real property, commercial, family, administrative, health, ethics, trusts and estates, tax, compliance and intellectual property law. Visiting Professors of Practice are not expected to produce written scholarship while at the school as part of the position, but are encouraged to participate in the scholarly life of the law school and will be supported in their scholarly endeavors consistent with other academic positions at the school should they choose to do so. Initial appointments are for one year, beginning August 1, 2023.

Located in downtown Boston, New England Law | Boston is noted for providing a welcoming community and early access to practical experience.
